Bay's comprehensive plan comes under attack

BY MARY G. SEILEY

Bay St. Louis city officials went back to the drawing board — literally — after their beleaguered, aging proposed comprehensive plan came under significant assault on two fronts.

Mayor Eddie Favre opened a meeting Wednesday night in front of a room of spectators, saying politics by City Council members threatens the sanctity of the whole plan. As it stands, parts of the plan have become outmoded simply because the process has taken so long, Favre said.

And by seeking to please individual constituents, the mayor said, City Council has let itself be "used by some to promote personal agendas and special interests and ... the overall good of the city of Bay St. Louis has become secondary."

In general, the mayor said, the planning process has left citizens highly suspicious of the city's intent. "Everybody's so damn paranoid that somebody's going to slip something by..." Favre said. The attitude is that "nobody can be trusted."

Mike Cuevas, who held the chief administrative post under Favre until two years ago, had even stronger words to say. She issued a four-page condemnation of the plan, and said the fact that a majority of City Council is seriously considering adopting it is "appalling."

Cuevas, now a planning consultant, attacked the plan's approach as a no-growth policy, citing inadequate provisions for multi-family and commercial development, saying it would create a "bureaucratic nightmare for anyone who wants to locate or relocate in Bay St. Louis."

"Every innovative idea or plan will have to be denied because you will have no legal basis to allow change. 'No Growth' will be your adopted policy. The proposed map reflects regressive government action brought about by reactive, not proactive effort by City

Council agreed with Favre that the plan's "Future Land Use" map had been drawn in much too much detail to serve its intended purpose — a fact that has prompted massive public reaction to details and bogged down council's consideration.

Since the map shows projected land uses on a lot-by-lot basis, many citizens are fearful adoption of the plan may result in a rezoning of their land.

City officials repeatedly have stressed that's not the case. The Future Land Use Map is supposed to be a general picture of how the city would like to see development progress over the next two decades.

Still, some properties on the map would require rezoning to accommodate the plan, and city officials concede that the map will serve as the basis of future zoning decisions.

Thursday, city officials were following up on the meeting by seeking to have the Future Land Use map re-drawn in a much more general way — erasing property lines and showing only the types of development that should occur about town.

That may calm some citizens' fear of the document and clear the way for council action, city officials hope.

But there were other changes espoused by Favre as well. He noted that Casino Magic has an $11 million golf course under construction on property that is shown as R-1, or single family residential land.

That's unrealistic and "misleading," the mayor said, and has happened simply because the plan was drawn on paper before the construction started.

"It is vitally important that we do not lose sight of the original reason that the plan was commissioned, and that was to lay the groundwork" for three things, the mayor said:

— A complete re-draft of the existing city zoning ordinance, so that we have a current, up-to-date coherent, flexible and understandable document.

— The zoning of the newly annexed area and a review of the zoning of the area annexed in 1967, which was done without the benefit of a comprehensive plan.

— The development of an historic preservation ordinance.

City Attorney John Scaffide termed the existing zoning ordinance "woefully inadequate, a mish-mash" of regulations that need overhaul immediately.

While the comprehensive plan won't change existing zoning, he emphasized, it will have a big impact on what will be the original zoning of the newly annexed area: lands developed by Casino Magic and other Cedar Point property owned by would-be casino developers.

What happens to those properties has been the subject of widespread debate and concern. Scores of citizens have urged the city to draw up a plan that will preclude an additional casino in the Cedar Point area. Some council members have pushed to see just that happen, but Favre, for the second time in recent months, is threatening to veto any such move.

The mayor again noted that the city was able to annex the property only after signing pre-annexation agreements that promised the city would allow and encourage casino development at Bay Cover and the "Raintree" tract.

Those agreements promised, among other things, that the city's comprehensive planning process would accommodate the owners' proposed casino development.

"It is not in the best interest of the city for the plan to recommend courses of action which are likely to expose the city to liability for breach of prior agreements and commitments," Favre said. "In this regard, I must remind you that the City Council unanimously approved pre-annexation agreements with various parties and entities prior to the 1992 annexation proceedings, and the proposed "resort designation" would be in keeping with those agreements and commitments.

"City Council has given its word through the pre-annexation agreements. Good faith and fair play dictate that the pre-annexation agreements be honored. To do otherwise would break faith and show that the City Council and the city of Bay St. Louis cannot be trusted to keep their word."

Favre said he would "do what I have to do in order to preserve the integrity of the city and its commitments and to show that we can be trusted and relied upon to keep our word."

He asked council to "put aside all the politics and personal agendas and special interests and to act in the best interest of our beloved Bay St. Louis and all its residents."

Cuevas, meanwhile, urged the city to re-think major portions of the plan aside from the casino issue. The document's provisions for housing, she said, are woefully inadequate, except to accommodate single family residential housing.

"It may be more prudent to wall the city and issue keys to existing property owners, because the welcome mat is being withdrawn," she said.

And, said Cuevas, the plan's approach to commercial development is lacking. "I think perhaps you have thumbed your nose at a diversified economic future for our city if this land use map indicates how little you expect our city to grow."

"You will be successful in eliminating any opportunities this city may have to attract new business, relocate businesses to new sites, expand home occupations to off-site locations and stifle any new entrepreneurial growth if this map truly reflects your vision," she said.

Cuevas was retained months ago as the city's prime consultant in the depot restoration project — a project she has touted as a shot in the arm for redevelopment of the depot area. But, she told council, the proposed map shows a reduction in the existing commercial properties around the depot.

"I hope this is a serious coloring error on someone's part," said Cuevas. "How do you expect the depot restoration to bring any economic benefits to Bay St. Louis if you only look to discourage a depressed neighborhood from reinvesting in their community?"

Council agreed it should have the Land Use Map revised to show a general picture of future development. The also agreed to have copies made of a map existing land uses in the city, and the city's current zoning map.

The current zoning map is being updated, council was told, to reflect changes that have been approved over the years by City Council but never transposed to the official map.

There is an old saying ...

"You don't know what you have until it's gone."

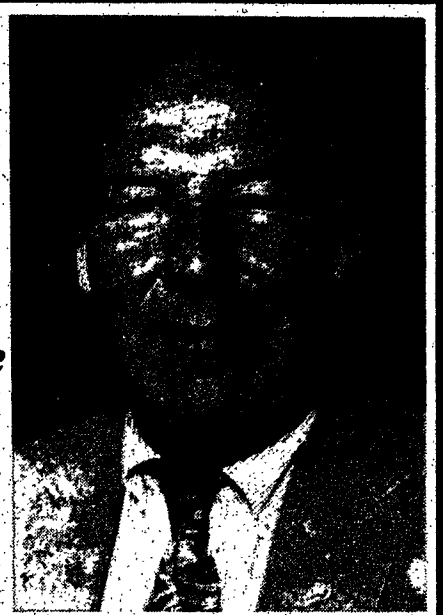

However, we KNOW what we have and we WANT to KEEP it that way.

We can do this by re-electing ...

Board delays action on engineering

BY TRACI BONNEY

The Hancock County school board withheld action at its recess meeting October 23 on a recommendation to hire Garner Russell & Associates for engineering services for the water well at Hancock North Central Elementary School.

Board trustee Tony Caston was most vocal in his opposition to the fee, not to exceed $8,000, which was set forth in the recommendation.

"It's ridiculous to pay $8,000 for engineering services on a well," he stated. Caston was in favor of trying to repair the well instead of replace it.

Zoe Bretzius, the district's consultant on water issues, showed the board two samples she had taken from the well.

"I took this one back in the spring," she said, placing a bottle of clear water on the board table. "This one I took about a month ago," she added, setting a bottle of gray sludge next to the first sample.

"Your well is full of sand; the casing is shot, and it's leaking sand into the well. It's trashing the equipment. You need to get this resolved as soon as possible."

Bretzius said the most practical solution is to sink a new well near the old one, but Caston maintained that they should be able to install a new, slightly smaller casing inside the old one.

"You have more than 900 students at that school now," Bretzius said. "That means the school is using an average of more than 78,000 gallons of water a day. Right now, that well — which we call 'B.C.', because it was sunk before (Hurricane) Camille — is causing sand to get into the kitchen equipment, the toilets; it's making a mess."

"If you sink a smaller casing, you're going to ask the pump to work that much harder, which will wear the pump out sooner than it would with the larger casing."

Other options were discussed, including tapping into the Kiln Water District's lines, but those lines don't go near the school at present.

Bretzius said they may, as the water district expands its coverage area, and the school district may be able to work out a deal with the water district to buy the school's well — new or repaired — when the school taps into the water district's lines.

The school board trustees decided they needed to do some more information gathering before deciding whether to repair or replace the well. So, when they arrived at item #12 on the consent agenda, which recommended the hiring of Garner Russell & Associates, the board held the item without voting on it.

The school board next meets Monday, Nov. 6, 4:30 p.m. at the school district office.

SUPERVISOR DISTRICT #5

"CUEVAS' QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

The long-awaited election day—by the candidates—if not by anyone else, is set for Tuesday.

Just about every candidate I have spoken to, and that's about all of them, will be glad to see Tuesday come.

The earlier filing date by about four months over previous state and county elections has really drawn the campaign out.

The majority of candidates has really campaigned hard over the long grind.

So now it is up to us, the qualified electors, to go to the polls on Tuesday and vote for the candidates of our choice.

This is a general election, so a voter can vote for whomever he or she pleases, mix or match, as the saying goes. You can vote for Democrats, Republicans and Independents.

I realize you may be tired of reading my saying about every vote counts, but this is a very important fact.

Indications are there will be several very close races for some key positions in both state and local elections.

Our candidates have done their part, and it is now up to us to exercise our rights by voting for the candidates we feel will do the best job for our state and county.

You can also help our government by reminding your relatives, friends and neighbors about the election on Tuesday.

Some may even need a ride to the polls.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. Tuesday.

Remember, vote Tuesday, November 7, 1995.

I hope to see you at the polls.

We received numerous telephone calls late Friday afternoon about the cancellation of the Bay High-St. Stanislaus football game.

I hate to see this happen again in our community. I can remember when the high school football games discontinued between the Rocks and Tigers many years ago, and the community lost.

All it takes is for a "bad apple" to destroy a very good thing.

Good high school football competition between schools is good for a community. It is more so when the competing teams are as close to each other as Stanislaus and Bay High are.

I sure hope the differences can be worked out, and the series can resume next season.

Taylor announces $100,000 grant for juvenile justice programs

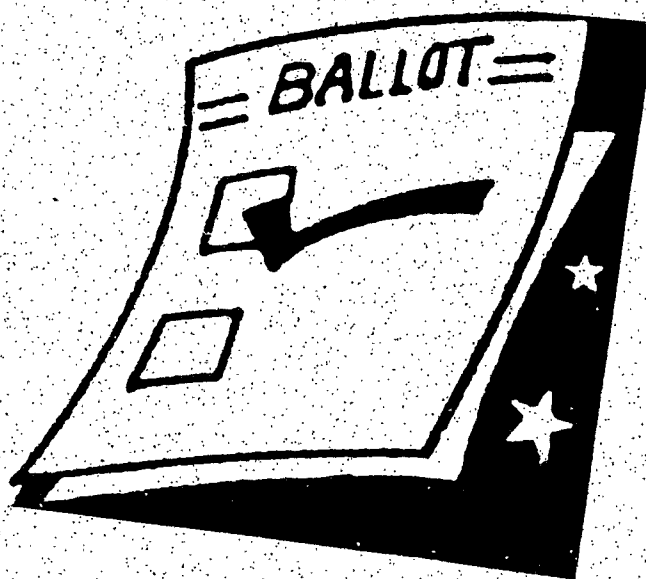

The Mississippi Division of Public Safety Planning has been awarded a $100,000 grant to improve the state's juvenile justice system and its administration, announced Congressman Gene Taylor.

Taylor said some of the "challenge activities" the grant provides for include alternatives to jail for non-violent offenders, such as community service, and secure confinement for violent offenders.

The grant was awarded by the U.S. Department of Justice under the Challenge Grants program. The amount of funding is based on the state's juvenile population and on the state's decision to participate.

PEER Committee looking at LEAP deal by Phillips

Departed Mississippi Human Services Director Gregg Phillips seemed a cinch to get the same job in his native Alabama until some of his baggage here caught up with him.

Now his appointment by Alabama Gov. Fob James has been put on hold pending the outcome of an investigation by the Legislative PEER Committee back in Mississippi into his ethical dealings prior to his departure from the Mississippi post in May.

Throughout his year-and-a-half as head of the 3500-employee DHS, Phillips was controversial. It's uncanny that he would leave under conditions that skate very closely to a serious state ethics violation, in fact it may very well be one.

The sticky wicket has to do with a fat consulting contract he landed for himself immediately upon leaving DHS, with an outfit his agency had been doing business with.

All of it stems from a job training program called LEAP (Learn, Earn, and Prosper) based at Ole Miss that DHS has funded to the tune of $20 million the past three years.

PEER had been looking into the LEAP deal when Phillips meantime handed the legislative investigators further ammunition by cutting his deal with an outfit called Centec based just outside Jackson.

Centec, it turns out, is leasing mobile learning laboratories to the LEAP program to the tune of about $300,000 a year. What PEER is reportedly concerned about is what took place in the transaction whereby Centec was assured the mobile laboratories would be funded by DHS through the LEAP program.

This took a contract that was signed by Phillips. Therein comes into play Section 109 of the state Constitution, the stiff conflict of interest provision which has nabbed several legislators and other public officials in the past. It simply states that no lawmaker or public official who is a member of a governing body shall be interested "directly or indirectly" in any contract funded by the body of which he was a member.

The only concern seems to be that because Phillips was an administrator and not a legislator, nor technically a member of a board, he could not exactly fit under Section 109. Evidently, the state Ethics Commission has shied away from taking the lead in trying to nail Phillips and is letting PEER wrestle with it.

Also, the fact that Phillips is gone from the DHS job and is also trying to be gone from the state seems to have cooled any aggressive movement by the Ethics Commission.

However, the PEER investigators seem to believe they have a good case which needs to be pursued. That decision will depend on what the Legislative members of the Peer committee do when they meet again right after the November 7 election.

Even Phillips, according to a printed report in a Montgomery, Ala. newspaper, has told Gov. James he expects the PEER report to be critical of him when it comes out.

Phillips' background for heading the DHS was hardly suitable for the job of running such a large agency which deals with the lives of thousands of needy people and many millions of dollars in federal and state funds. The only jobs he had had beforehand were as a stockbroker and a Republican campaign fund raiser.

During the time he headed the Mississippi agency, millions of dollars in federal funds which could have been utilized to help child care programs were either delayed or allowed to lapse.

Now if Phillips moves on to do the same work over in Alabama, an even larger state, he certainly will come with a cloud over him if not saddled with a Mississippi ethics violation.

ASK THE V.A.

By Donald Mauffray

Purchasing VA-owned property, refinancing, etc.

By Donald Mauffray, CVSO
Q. Must I be a veteran to purchase a property owned by the VA?

A. No. All VA properties are available for sale to qualified buyers, whether they are veterans or not. A list of these properties is available at your local Veterans Service Office, or by calling the VA Regional Office at 1-800-827-1000 to get a copy of the latest list.

Q. How do I find out how to purchase a VA-owned property?

A. The best way is to contact a local broker who participates in the VA sales program. All licensed brokers are eligible.

It is VA's policy to use the services of local real estate brokers to sell the properties. Brokers have the responsibility of showing VA properties to prospective purchasers and preparing purchase offers.

Participating brokers receive instructional material regarding VA's sales program and are familiar with its sales procedures. VA pays the sales commission.

Q. Can I use my VA-guaranteed loan to buy land I am planning to build a house on in the future?

A. A VA-guaranteed loan cannot be used to buy undeveloped land unless it is part of a package that includes building a home.

Q. I have a high interest rate on my VA-guaranteed home loan. Can I refinance this loan to reduce the interest rate?

A. Yes. VA recommends veterans with interest rates two percentage points or higher than the market rate apply for VA's Interest Rate Reduction Refinancing Loan (IRRRL).

This loan is used strictly to reduce the interest rate on an existing VA-guaranteed loan and often requires no out-of-pocket cost to the veteran homeowner. The collective savings to veterans are substantial. Call the VA regional office at 1-800-827-1000 for a list of private lenders who grant IRRRLs in your area.

Q. How can I get a replacement of my original DD 214 or discharge papers?

A. Again, call the VA regional office at the number listed above. If you have a VA claim file, your DD 214 may be in it. If not, I have the Request Forms SF 180 in my office, or you may have VA regional office send you one or more.

When completed, they should be mailed to the National Personnel Records Center, 9700 Page Blvd., St. Louis, MO 63132-5100.

Miss.-Ala. Troopers to combine campaign

Mississippi and Alabama will participate in a Nov. 16 "Hands Across the Border" campaign to stress the cooperative efforts of the two states' law enforcement agencies in making highways safer.

Law enforcement officers from the two states will convene at the Mississippi Welcome Center on Interstate 10 East at 11 a.m. to greet motorists and provide them with safety information materials. At approximately noon, the officers will travel by motorcade to the Alabama Welcome Center and interact with motorists at that location.

"Hands Across the Border" calls attention to the excellent teamwork between Mississippi and Alabama law enforcement agencies," said Jim Ingram, Mississippi's commissioner of public safety.

Donald O'Cain, executive director, Mississippi Division of Public Safety Planning, and governor's representative for highway safety, noted that "by interacting with the public in this manner, the law enforcement officers demonstrate that both states are fully committed to the safety of motorists and that those who would violate the laws of either state will gain nothing by crossing the border."

Billy Terrell, director of the division's Office of Highway Safety, and Milton E. Safford, Selective Traffic-Enforcement Program coordinator for the Alabama Department of Economic and Community Affairs, said that "the exceptionally strong communication and cooperation between law enforcement agencies of our states have been key factors in apprehending drunk drivers, other traffic offenders and non-traffic offenders who cross state lines. We are united in making Mississippi and Alabama safer for all of our citizens."

BREWER'S WORLD

By Jimmie Brewer

It was a cold, dark day in the lives of Mary and myself. It was a chilling experience with lasting repercussions for which neither of us will soon forget. An act for which I assume full responsibility, and one which I will have to carry with me, like a heavy weight, for the rest of my life.

Any man who would beat his wife, or significant other, is something much less than a real man. I am now that person.

I tell this personal story for two reasons. The first is to somehow relieve this horrible feeling I have had since the incident occurred. The other is to tell the world and maybe spare some other couple the anguish that follows such an atrocity as beating one's loved one.

I personally never believed I was capable of doing it. It took both Mary and me by complete surprise. However, in retrospect, and with a little soul searching, I now believe it was not so much a reflex motion, but more of climax to events that have been happening in the last two years.

I can assure you that if I could find a way or speak some words which would make it better for Mary, I would do just that. But, the damage has been done, and there is no way to undo it. Every since the act, which took place three weeks ago, Mary's eyes have not been able to look into mine, nor can I look directly into hers. I should have known better. I came from a better family than that. I never saw my Pa beat my mother, which is why some, 42 years later they remain happily married. So what caused it? What on earth could have provoked me into such a state of mind that would allow me to beat Mary?

The morning started of innocently enough, just our usual Sunday morning routine. A little coffee, a couple of Salems and a nice conversation about our future dreams. Now that I look back on it, I did have a strange feeling about me on that fall day. I guess I did it for all the wrong reasons. I wanted to control, I wanted to be respected, I wanted to be in power. And now that it's over, I regret ever doing it. It is not likely that Mary will ever let it happen again anyway. She is a determined woman who has somehow managed to pull herself up again. She has put it behind her, and may actually come out of it a better person.

No, it is not likely that Mary will ever allow me to beat her in the game of golf again. For two years, I have followed her around the course getting my behind whooped on every occasion. But on that one day, I was the king of the course. I sizzled in with a score of 106, just ahead of Mary who came limping off the course with a paltry score of 107. An exhilarating victory for me, and a humiliating defeat for her.

The sweet smell of success was a long time in coming, but worth every bit. Oh sure, she will have another chance and will probably trounce me handily, but she can never take that one day of total domination away from me.

On a much more serious note, domestic violence is a sick act. The thought of a man actually hitting a woman is repulsive to me, and should not be tolerated by anyone.

Praise for do-gooders this week goes out to those dudes and dudettes out there who handle defeat as well as they handle victory. Peace.

Stephens fund raises $1,500

Relatives reported this week that they have collected about $1,500 to pay off funeral expenses and help the family of Lori Stephens, who died last September of cancer.

Carolyn Burmond, Stephens' aunt, said the community was generous after the Echo reported on the young mother, who held off taking radiation treatments until her daughter was born last July.

"Altogether with a po-boy sale, and donations made to a special fund set up at Hancock Bank, there was about $1,500 collected," said Burmond.

She said the money was used to pay off Stephens' funeral expenses, buy a tombstone and put a slab over her grave.

The rest is in a special trust fund, and will be used as the children need it," she said.

Besides her husband, Preston (Ponnie) Stephens, Stephens is survived by a three-month-old daughter, Heather Corrine, Ronie Jr., going on five, and Shelley Lynn, soon to be three.

Solid waste plan adopted in 1992

BY ED LEPOMA

Hancock County began a concerted effort to take responsibility for its solid waste as far back as 1992 when the Board of Supervisors adopted a Solid Waste Management Plan.

Shortly afterwards, in April of 1993, the cities of Bay St. Louis and Waveland agreed to participate. Bay St. Louis added a garbage collection fee to residents monthly water bill. The city of Waveland diverts a portion of water and gas payments to finance the service.

Although the solid waste plan was adopted in 1992, it wasn't until November of 1994, that supervisors, by a unanimous vote, assigned all rights to operate a rubbish site and landfill at Standard to the Hancock County Solid Waste Management Board.

In March of 1994, the Solid Waste District let the contract for garbage pickup in the county and in Waveland and Bay St. Louis to Joey Boudin's Waste And Recycling Co., of Waveland.

Boudin's crews began twice-a-week garbage pickups in the cities that month, then once-a-week pickup in rural areas of the county in April of 1994.

The whole operation seemed to be going smoothly until last September when the Solid Waste District announced Trans-American Waste Industries of Mobile, Ala., was taking over operations and management at the county's Standard rubbish site. The District in June of 1995 signed a 20-year contract for Trans-American to manage the rubbish site, then the landfill when it becomes operational.

Shortly after the announcement, stunned supervisors were told the Hancock County School Board might challenge the District's lease with Trans-American.

County School Board Superintendent Myrna Bourgeois came before supervisors to contend that she believed the school board's lease with the county prohibits the county from turning over operations at Standard to a third-party or sub-contractor. She has asked for an attorney general's ruling.

Bourgeois leveled more charges at a school board meeting Sept. 24, charging local residents had pictures that people were illegally dumping paint cans and other prohibited materials at Standard since Trans-American took over and that people also had pictures of vehicles with St. Tammany tags coming to bring their garbage to Standard.

And, at the last school board meeting, members contended the board has never received a dime from the land it has leased at Standard.

According to the lease, first signed in the 1970's, then renewed in 1989, the school board said supervisors agreed to pay them $3 per cubic truck yard for commercial garbage that is dumped at Standard.

Les Fillingame, chairman of the county's Solid Waste District, has invited school officials to the District's meeting this Wednesday to discuss the situation.

Asked about Trans-American's management of the Standard rubbish site, Fillingame said, "It is a 100 percent improvement, and it's not costing us one cent to operate it now."

He said Trans-American has cleaned up the area considerably, and the site now remains open 5 and a half days a week. He said hours of operation have been announced to the public for the convenience of everyone in the county.

Fillingame said the public seems confused as to what is being dumped at the Standard rubbish site.

"We are not allowing anything to be dumped there now that wasn't dumped there before. In fact, we have discouraged the volume that is being dumped by allowing Trans-American to set fees for commercial dumping."

"If anything being dumped there now is considered commercial dumping, than there's been commercial dumping since Day One of the operation," Fillingame said.

Based on definitions written in the lease, Fillingame said there is still no commercial dumping going on.

Fillingame said citizens and professional haulers have been dumping construction debris, tree limbs, roofing tiles, discarded wood, cardboard boxes, bottles and paper and other allowed items at the rubbish at the site for years.

Since the beginning, dumping at the rubbish site has been worked and managed by a staff of two to three county employees.

The county employees are now employees of Trans-American, and Fillingame said a person is stationed at the rubbish site's entrance daily to inspect what's being dumped there.

The site and overall look of it has been improved too, Fillingame said. A new fence surrounds the site, and grass seed has been planted at the entrance leading into the site.

While the controversy with the school board was swirling, the Solid Waste District also has had to contend with allegations leveled against Boudin's future hauling plans.

Boudin has been conducting his business from an office and yard he maintains on Spruce Street, off Harbor Drive in Waveland's Bayou Phillips area.

He has picked up considerable commercial business, and now has a fleet of 16 trucks and 25 employees. He services over 25,000 households, plus hundreds of commercial customers in Hancock and Pearl River counties, and some in St. Tammany Parish, La.

Residents became concerned last month when Boudin began clearing a 10-acre site he owns on Harbor Drive, and workers dug a large pit.

They came before supervisors to complain they didn't want Boudin's operation any closer to their houses than it now was. In fact, they said they would like Boudin run out of the neighborhood altogether, but supervisors told them the area was unzoned so they cannot regulate what kind of business Boudin can run on Harbor Drive.

Residents also charged Boudin illegally dumped at the site, and was planning to put a transfer site there. Some residents claimed Boudin wouldn't pick up their garbage after they complained to the media about his operations.

Later, Harbor Drive residents staged a march across the street from Boudin's property, and Boudin offered to sell the land and move elsewhere if a buyer came forward.

Boudin denied he planned a transfer site at the area or that trucks would be washed at the site. He said he dug the pit to provide fill for an office and maintenance shed he was building on the property.

The Solid Waste District has been asked to monitor Boudin's activities and customer complaints while residents await word from federal and state environmental and health officials on whether he has violated any laws.

Boudin's lucrative contract comes up for renewal next March, and citizens have asked to have an input into any new contract that is awarded.

Supervisors remain uneasy about the whole situation, although at least four new members will join the board in January.

At their last meeting they tabled a request by the Solid

A Message to the Voters of District 2

As we approach the final days of the campaign, it is necessary for us to decide on the candidate we feel best qualified to resolve the issues for the next four years. In making our decision, I feel a fundamental quality that should be looked for is experience.

I am the only candidate for Supervisor of District 2 who can offer 25 years of successful business experience and 4 1/2 years as Supervisor of District 2, thus allowing me to immediately become an effective member of the Board of Supervisors. Not only understanding the difficult structure and complexity of our 17 million dollar budget, but understanding the internal structure of County government to include the Unit System.

In my campaign, I have tried to meet each of you personally. If for some reason I did not meet you, I would like to take this opportunity to ask for not only your vote, but your support in the Nov. 7th general election.

Please remember to VOTE. Your vote is the only voice you have in government.

Hundreds attend PRCC homecoming

Oct. 28 was homecoming and a very special day for hundreds of Pearl River Community College alumni.

Jacqueline Haar returned home from Fresno, Calif., and Robert Jelks made his way from Paris, Tenn. Others came from Texas, Louisiana, Alabama, Florida and all over Mississippi.

"We are so pleased with the turnout," said Donna Wilson, executive director of the Pearl River Alumni Association. "At one time, there were 10 different organized reunions going on. It was great to see so many alumni, who spanned nearly every decade of Pearl River's existence."

Reunions and tours of the campus began early Saturday, which led to a packed crowd for the homecoming luncheon in the college cafeteria.

Haar, a 1957 graduate, received the award for traveling the longest distance to attend homecoming. Jelks, a member of the 1934 class, was honored as being the earliest graduate in attendance.

Doug Mooney of Picayune was presented the Alumnus of the Year award. Steve Regan of Calhoun, La., David Earl Johnson of Poplarville, and Antrice McGill-Eddie of Houston, Texas, were inducted into the 1995 Sports Hall of Fame.

The Waveland American Legion Post 77 was presented a Distinguished Service Award, and Jonathan Mitchell of Carriere was presented the Dobie Holden Memorial Scholarship.

Queen Kimberly Green of Columbia and her court were featured during the luncheon, along with the college's River-Road performing group.

On program were Jackanell Smith, who represented the Board of Trustees; Ott Brockman, chair of the Development Foundation; D. R. Davis, representing the Wildlife Club; Jason Simon, vice president of the PRCC Student Council; PRCC president Ted Alexander, and Betty Rose Breazeale, incoming president of the Alumni Association.

The college also had an opportunity to show off its new bookstore, counseling center, post office, and grill addition which leads to the cafeteria.

At halftime of the football game, the Hall of Fame members were featured, along with members of the 1995 championship teams for men's basketball, women's basketball and golf.

Downtown Poplarville joined in the fun as the ninth annual Old Fashion Arts & Craft Show was held on the courthouse lawn, and several merchants decorated their display windows in maroon and gold.

Forty-five alumni and friends of the college participated in the annual homecoming golf tournament on Friday at Hillsdale.

New boat purchases require careful consideration

With the fall/winter "boat show season" fast approaching, many anglers will be shopping for a new boat, but, warns former world champion bass angler Ken Cook, the decision of which boat model to buy should be considered very carefully.

"I believe the single most important consideration, aside from finances, is answering the question of how you intend to use the boat," explains Cook.

"There are a lot of different models available today, and it really is important to make sure what you purchase suits your type of fishing."

For example, says Cook, if you fish local, regional or even national tournaments that are held on large impoundments, you'll be much safer as well as more comfortable in a longer 18 to 20 foot boat.

A larger boat also requires a more powerful engine to run it efficiently. If this is your first boat and you are not an experienced boat driver, it might be a better option to start with a smaller boat and less powerful outboard.

"If you don't fish competitively but instead spend your time on smaller lakes and streams," Cook says, "then a shorter boat, perhaps even an aluminum one instead of fiberglass, might be a better choice."

"The type of vehicle you drive may also play a part in determining which size boat to get," he continues. "Today's longer bass boats require a strong tow vehicle with a lot of power. You can pull a big boat with a light truck or car, but it isn't always safe. It can also damage your car's engine and transmission with the added strain of pulling a big boat."

"If you drive a small car, you need to think in terms of a smaller, lighter boat."

The Evinrude pro adds that it is also important to study the boat's interior design to make certain it suits your needs as an angler.

"Storage space is always critical," says Cook, "especially for rods and tackle boxes. Not only do you need enough room to take all your equipment with you on the water, you also need to have that same equipment readily available."

"If the only storage area is in the back of the boat and you always fish out of the front, you're going to get tired of walking back and forth to get new lures and tackle."

Other thoughts to consider are additional uses for the boat, such as skiing or pleasure boating with family members and friends. If this is the case, one of the combination fish and ski models might be a better choice than a pure fishing boat.

"Of course, cost is also important," says Cook. "Buying a new boat today usually represents a major investment, but at the same time, financing now is easier than ever before."

"I suggest anyone wanting to purchase a new boat this winter shop carefully and look at what's available in as many boat and outdoor shows as possible before making an actual purchase."

Pass Christian mayor takes office

BY ED LEPOMA

Billy McDonald, Pass Christian's new mayor, was officially sworn in Thursday before hundreds of supporters and politicians from Harrison and Hancock Counties.

A gala reception followed the 4 p.m. ceremonies at City Hall, with refreshments furnished by friends of McDonald.

Retired City Judge M.L. Ward administered the oath of office to McDonald while his wife, Elaine, daughter, India, and son, Tyler, looked on.

McDonald, who handily beat out two other candidates in a special Oct. 3 election to fill an unexpired term, made an appeal to the sometimes-divided Board of Aldermen to cast past differences aside for the good of Pass Christian.

He told supporters he was proud and honored to be serving as mayor for the next two years.

"It's a responsibility I will not take lightly," he said.

McDonald said the nation's founding fathers believed that government should be representative of the people.

"No body of elected officials is closer to, or more representative of all the people of Pass Christian than we are," he said.

McDonald said the mayor and its Board of Aldermen "come from every nook and cranny and crevice of every part of this city. And, the people we represent are quite literally our neighbors."

He said city officials can have a definite impact at the state and national level, and he asked aldermen to put aside past differences.

"I believe that if we cultivate closer communication and cooperation among our members throughout the year, we can be a major influence on the quality of life for the citizens of Pass Christian. Most important, we can learn from one another, and use what we learn to better represent our people," said McDonald.

"Most important, we can learn from one another, and use what we learn to better serve the people we represent. We can also use what we learn to better advise our state senators and state representatives about grassroots problems and how they can help us fight them," he added.

McDonald likened the 50 states to 50 independent laboratories.

"In America we seldom legislate drastic governmental or social change for the entire nation. Instead, we tend to experiment ... piecemeal ... state-by-state ... Our system favors evolutionary change, not revolutionary change," said McDonald.

He called on his Board of Aldermen to work as a unified group, "each benefitting from the successes and mistakes of the others."

"For that to happen, we must have better and ongoing communication among us. Our principal task will be to determine ways we can best use the collection wisdom and experience of our group to mutual advantage," said McDonald.

McDonald actually took office two days after his election when Hurricane Opal was threatening the Mississippi Coast.

The 59-year-old real estate developer and former Harrison County supervisor won 62 percent of the vote over incumbent Ward 2 Alderman Margaret Jean Kalif and political newcomer, attorney Joe Kelley.

He replaces Ted Lawyer, who resigned Aug. 30, citing failing health.

During Lawyer's term, city finances were shaky, and when he went on medical disability, the Board of Aldermen was split into factions over several issues.

McDonald is a seasoned politician, having served Harrison County as Supervisor representing the Third District from 1976 to 1988. He also served as Board President and president of the Mississippi Association of Supervisors.

He lost the mayoral race to Lawyer two years ago, when Lawyer was re-elected to a second term.

McDonald will serve the remainder of the term, which expires in July of 1997.

Those attending McDonald's ceremony included: State Sen. Bill Johnson, David LaRosa, supervisor, representing Harrison County's Third District, the mayors of Waveland, Long Beach and Gulfport, the Harrison and Hancock County Circuit Court clerks, and Hancock County Sheriff Ronnie Peterson.

Bay credit union robbed

BY ED LEPOMA

Bay St. Louis police were interviewing witnesses Friday after the robbery of the Gulfport VA Federal Credit Union Thursday afternoon. The suspect remains at large.

Bay St. Louis Detective Lt. Tom Burleson said a black man, wearing a bandana to partially obscure his face, walked into the building at 804 Hwy. 90 about 2:48 p.m. Thursday, snatched an undetermined amount of money from behind a teller's station, then fled west on foot into nearby woods.

The man did not pull a weapon, and no one was hurt in the incident, Burleson said.

Police are seeking a black man between 5'6 and 5'8, weighing about 160 pounds, Burleson said.

The Hancock County Sheriff's Office is holding a New Orleans man on two separate child molestation charges.

Deputy Glen Strong, criminal investigator with the office of Sheriff Ronnie Peterson, identified the man as Peter Eric McCall, 42, whose listed address is 539 Belleville Street, New Orleans. He said McCall was arrested at the county jail on Nov. 1, around 4:30 p.m., and is being held in lieu of $40,000 bond.

Strong said McCall is charged with one count of sexual battery of a young female child that occurred in early January, and on a second charge of fondling another young female child last March.

Strong said sheriff's deputies were questioning children at the county jail when McCall was spotted in the parking lot, and brought in for questioning.

After interviewing McCall, Strong said he was arrested.

Fall weather perfect for preparing gardens

By Dr. Milo Burnham
Horticulturist
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

The first weekend of October held two days of absolutely beautiful weather. They were the kind of days that make putting up with a cold, wet winter or a hot, dry summer worthwhile.

I spent a good bit of time working in the yard. The garden soil was moist from the rains earlier in the week, and this made digging to move or set in plants easy work. Some of the work I did will mean less work next spring and summer.

The green berries on the liriope that borders shrub and flower beds in my yard were beginning to turn purple and ripen. Those berries will result in hundreds, if not thousands of little liriope plants next summer.

It's a lot easier to remove the berry-laden stalks from the liriope borders than to pull the seedling plants next year.

With that job done, I tackled removing the not-yet-mature seed heads from the garlic chives in the yard. Garlic chive flowers are pretty in late summer, but every flower head makes hundreds of seeds.

Before you know it, you may have garlic chives everywhere. In the spring, the young seedlings can be so thick they remind you of a new lawn.

I plugged snapdragon plants into open spaces in the perennial border. They won't provide much color this winter, but without a major freeze, these plants will provide a great show next spring.

I also set out young foxglove and hollyhock plants in anticipation of the terrific show they'll make next spring and summer. I'm planting pansies to provide spots of bright winter color.

Budded and blooming mum plants were so readily available at such reasonable prices, I couldn't resist and got three pots to set in the planter by the front door. The caladiums that lived in the planter all summer were finished. If I remember to keep the mums watered, they'll provide several weeks of good color.

A very light pruning to the climbing pyracantha on the front wall brought it back into bounds. This is the wrong time of year to prune, but climbing shrubs often require more maintenance than a working person can provide.

Keep this in mind if you're contemplating training one of your bushes into an exotic display.

I recently noticed someone had taken advantage of the beautiful weather to do some "rejuvenation" pruning to the boxwood by his front entry. The location of each plant is now marked only by totally bare stubs about 6 inches high.

I think it will be a miracle if they ever leaf out again, but I'll watch for it, since plants can be pretty resilient in the face of great adversity.

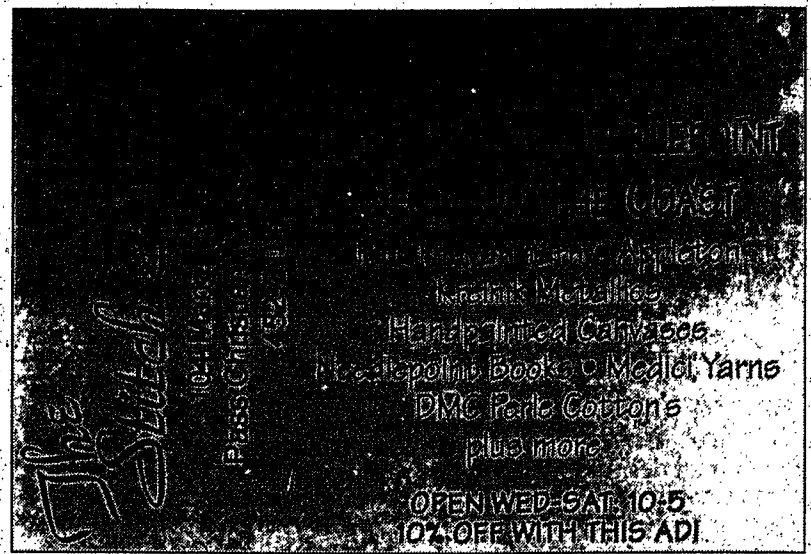

Red spider lilies have been blooming and leaves are beginning to show at the bases of the bare flower stems. These plants will have green leaves until next spring. The time for digging, dividing and moving these bulbs is when the leaves begin to turn yellow in the spring.

Digging now will be hard on the plants as they are beginning to build their food reserves for next year's flowers.

Most of my dark-purple leafed opal basil is in a jar of vinegar that has turned a pretty rose color. As the color bleeds into the white vinegar, so does the basil aroma and taste. A good whiff of the vinegar reveals it to be less cutting and more "basily."

It was truly a great October weekend. We need more just like it.

Public Service Commissioner Curt Hebert (A-bear) has been serving the people of Mississippi for a long time. Leadership - Honesty - Innovation

Under Curt's leadership, the Mississippi Public Service Commission has become an honest, innovative regulatory process. More than that, he's worked to keep electricity rates in Southeast Mississippi among the lowest in the nation.

Jubilee

ment in one major piece of new litigation, concerning the earliest days of the concept of the Jubilee.

In another new but unrelated twist, Mississippi Gaming Commission officials are investigating a case involving some missing $25 poker chips at Jubilee, officials have confirmed.

The poker chip matter came to light in court documents representing a flurry of legal activity concerning top management of the casino.

Jon Turner, one of Jubilee's key management personnel, filed suit Oct. 23 in Hancock County Circuit Court against Alpha Gulf Coast, Inc., the subsidiary of Alpha Hospitality Inc., which runs the Jubilee, only a few days after he had been fired from his $80,000 per-year job.

He charged in that case he had been fired for one or two reasons: he had cooperated with the Gaming Commission in its investigation of some missing poker chips, and he had locked horns with Jubilee's general manager, John Kingsbury over terms of a buy-out of Bayou Caddy, Inc.

But Turner has been rehired by Jubilee and now serves in a consulting capacity, said his lawyer, Templeton Fowlkes. "He's reached a compromise with them and he's back working with them," said Fowlkes. Turner's settlement came a week after the lawsuit was filed, Fowlkes said.

Fowlkes also said Alpha Gulf Coast and Bayou Caddy have reached agreement on terms of the buy-out, but it has not been consummated.

Meanwhile, three members of the Lady family in Waveland, once avid backers of Jubilee, have sued Jubilee's former general manager, George Baxter, and Mike Cure, whose family owns the property that Jubilee has occupied at the tip end of Beach Boulevard.

In that case, the Lady family says Baxter has not turned over the shares of Bayou Caddy Inc. stock which he pledged in obtaining an $80,000 loan from the Ladys. Rather, the stock was conveyed by Baxter to Cure, the case alleges, and the loan has not been repaid.

Meanwhile, Turner's troubles with Alpha has been going on for about two years, according to Fowlkes.

In May 1993, Turner signed a seven-year employment contract with Alpha, promising him a $4,000-per-month salary, court records show.

After that, he was to get a percentage of Alpha's gross revenues, records in Hancock County Chancery Court show. A similar contract was signed by Eugene Lang, records show.

Both men filed suit against Alpha in February 1995, claiming the casino was in arrears. In addition, Turner and Lang claimed that they were third party beneficiaries of an unfulfilled buy-out arrangement between Bayou Caddy Inc. and Alpha.

Bayou Caddy Inc. is a group of investors who organized to get the casino project off the ground originally. George Baxter, who later lost his job at Jubilee amid a scandal, was president of Bayou Caddy Inc. when it organized. Other officers included Turner, Kingsbury, Lang and the Ladys.

The corporation has since changed its name to B.C. of Mis-issippi, Inc., with Bill Lady serving as president and chairman of the board. Lady said other current directors include Turner, Kingsbury, Lang and David Altman, a California resident.

When Alpha agreed to a $3.5 million buy-out of Bayou Caddy in May 1993, court records show the company promised money and/or stock as payment. Turner and Lang charged in Chancery Court that the buy-out contract was breached by Alpha, which had "refused to pay said monies and/or issue stock to Bayou Caddy's Casino Inc."

Alpha contested the right of either man individually to sue based on their individual membership on Bayou Caddy's board of directors.

Turner and Lang settled those cases out of court, Fowlkes said. Turner was, under terms of the settlement, rehired for one year, beginning in June 1995. The settlement included a $55,000 payment to be made in installments through March 1996, court records show. Fowlkes said Alpha is up-to-date on those payments.

But the honeymoon lasted only four months after Turner and Alpha patched up their relationship. While he performed in an "exemplary manner" as director of security and chief of community public relations, Turner claims he was suspended without pay "pending an investigation of a report that (Turner) had made statements to the Mississippi Gaming Commission and to other employees of (Alpha) that were contrary to company policy or untrue or detrimental to the company's welfare."

Turner said he never breached his employment contract with Alpha -- which in part requires strict confidentiality of corporation affairs -- and that he always "followed the rules and regulations of the Mississippi Gaming Commission in its investigation."

The lawsuit does not offer many details of the investigation, but it names two Jubilee employees who may possibly be involved.

Turner said he visited the Gaming Commission -- at their request -- at the end of the week he was suspended. Then, Fowlkes received a letter saying Turner's final paycheck would be the one issued Oct. 15. Turner's contract allowed his dismissal only for specified causes and required a 30-day notice.

An Oct. 17 letter from Alpha Gulf Coast's chief financial officer, James A. Cutler, to Fowlkes concerning Turner's dismissal, indicates an attempt to compensate Turner for his departure. Cutler said he was "disappointed" that Turner had refused "what we thought was a most generous offer in light of the circumstances..."

Turner was let go after his Oct. 15 paycheck. He filed suit Oct. 23, and was rehired for the second time, on Oct. 29, according to Fowlkes. Lang, who had once operated security for Jubilee, has settled his claims against Alpha and relocated to Las Vegas, Fowlkes said.

But there are other matters looming in Chancery Court concerning the original investors into Jubilee.

Three members of the Lady family -- Bill, Steve and Jim -- recently filed suit against Baxter and Cure to get access to stock in Bayou Caddy Inc. The Ladys say that Baxter had pledged 16 shares of that stock in an $80,000 loan deal.

But Baxter has "conveyed and delivered" that stock to Mike Cure, the suit claims, and has not repaid the $80,000 loan.

A June 22, 1995 letter filed in conjunction with the case from the Ladys' attorney, Carter O. Bise, to Gerald Gex, Cures' attorney, states:

"Several weeks ago, I spoke with you at which time you advised me that the Baxter stock shares had been delivered to you and you, in turn, had delivered those to Mike Cure... The Ladys advised me that they had spoken with George Baxter several days ago and Baxter indicated that he had no objection to them getting their certificates as of this date."

In July, 1993, Baxter assigned his interest of stock in the corporation to the Ladys in exchange for the loan, records show.

He also agreed to take out a $100,000 life insurance policy, with the Ladys as beneficiaries. The policy would be terminated upon payment of the $80,000 note, the suit states.

Jubilee opened in January, 1994, with Baxter at its helm. But in October 1994, during high winds and heavy seas, the Jubilee was forced to close operations. Baxter and several other employees stayed onboard the ship and they were charged later by state officials with having a wild party aboard the ship that night.

Baxter was forced to resign, and the Gaming Commission is trying to revoke his "finding of suitability" to engage in the state's gaming industry. Jubilee was fined $25,000 and lost its liquor license for a week as punishment. They did not, however, contest the punitive action and, officials say, have cooperated in investigations of that matter.

Baxter's attorney, Don Rafferty, says the state's account of what happened during the supposed "party" on the Jubilee is not accurate. Baxter plans to contest the proposed loss of his license and a $25,000 fine as well, Rafferty says.

He would not comment on the recent suit filed by the Ladys concerning Baxter's loan and stock arrangements, except to say that Baxter had done nothing "illegal or immoral" in that matter.

But there are much bigger problems on the table than that for Baxter: he faces sentencing Dec. 6 in U.S. District Court in New Orleans after pleading guilty to one-count of a federal indictment charging him in a money laundering scheme.

ELECT L. KAY JOHNSON Chancery Clerk NOVEMBER 7, 1995

To Our Mother, L. Kay Johnson, Candidate for Chancery Clerk:

One of the proudest days of our lives was watching you, our mother, graduate with honors from college. We will never understand how you were able to do it while working and raising two teenage daughters on your own. Despite how hard you worked and studied, you always made time to be with us and take care of us. You have worked so hard and come so far and, while doing so, set a wonderful example for us. We know that it's because of your love and guidance that we have become such strong, independent adults.

Now, as you are running for office, we wanted you to know that we are, once again, very proud of you. Through your campaign, we have been given the opportunity to watch hundreds of people discover what we have known for years... that you are a very intelligent, talented and special person. We love you very much, are proud of you beyond words and wish you all the luck in the world in this election.

Your daughters,
Shannon and Stacen

Game

p.m. (of the dismissal), he added. "They were pretty quiet."

Genna said the announcement of the cancellation left much of the team in tears. "The kids are taking it pretty hard," he said. "They really wanted to play. We had a tremendous week of practice." "But this is something we will learn from," Genna added. "I'm sure we'll play next year, but the situation needed to be cooled down."

Bay St. Louis city officials said added police patrols were added over the weekend to prevent any further acts of retaliation.

The junior varsity game for tomorrow night has also been canceled but Ryan said at this point, no further activities between the two schools are threatened. Both schools are scheduled to participate in the Hancock County Basketball Tournament scheduled Nov. 9-11 at Stanislaus.

Ryan did say, however, if the community is unable to "assume responsibility and maturity with regards to activities," then "we will make decisions as things transpire."

"We are called as educators to mold and teach young people that with privileges, you have responsibilities. When the responsibilities are not assumed, they lose a privilege."

Waste

Part of the application process to get state and federal permits to operate a rubbish and landfill at Standard required the listing and notification to 14 property owners who lived in the vicinity of the area.

Engineers originally envisioned Standard as a regional facility, and invited officials from Pearl River and Stone Counties in Mississippi and St. Tammany Parish in Louisiana to attend the public meeting and decide whether they wanted to join in the solid waste district that was to be created.

The county advertised a June 23 public hearing on the plan at the Civic Center Fairgrounds on Longfellow Road.

The legal notice, which ran in the Echo, gave citizens from June 11, 1992 until July 11, 1992 to comment on the plan.

Records show 32 people attended the public hearing, none listing an address from the Standard Community. Supervisors Robert Peterson, Howard Lizana, Wilmer Seymour, and Alton Kellar attended the hearing, but did not speak.

Consultants concluded, "There are no major modifications to the plan as the result of the public hearing."

Records also show that seven days after the public hearing, on June 30, 1992, Supervisors Seymour, Peterson, Michael Ladner, and Lizana moved to adopt the county's solid waste management plan. Supervisor Alton Kellar was absent at that meeting, and did not cast a vote.

Agreements to participate in a joint solid waste effort were executed by Bay St. Louis, Waveland and Hancock County in April of 1993, and supervisors, by a unanimous vote in November of 1994, assigned all rights to operate the rubbish site and landfill at Standard "for the balance of the period remaining on the contract, which is April 30, 2014," to the Hancock County Solid Waste Management Board.

The three-member board is composed of the president of the Hancock County Board of Supervisors, the mayors of Bay St. Louis and Waveland, or their representatives.

Supervisors also dedicated proceeds from a three-mill levy on all property in Hancock County, approximately $450,000 a year, to the newly created board.

In March of 1994, the Solid Waste District awarded a two-year contract to Boudin's Waste and Recycling Co. of Waveland to begin providing garbage pickup in the two municipalities and countywide. Boudin's was the lowest of three bidders, and the county contract pays him about $600,000 a year to provide the service.

Owner Joey Boudin's father, Bobby Boudin, began collecting and hauling trash in the county in the early 1960's, but turned over control of the company to his son about two years ago. The elder Boudin now serves as the county's Civil Defense Director.

Boudin's began regular pickups in the cities in March of 1994, and extended pickups to the county the following month.

In June of 1995, the Solid Waste District entered into a contract with Trans-American Waste Industries of Mobile, Ala., to operate the rubbish site at Standard and, eventually, the landfill. Trans-American took over the rubbish site last September.

Les Fillingame, the Bay St. Louis city planner who also serves as chairman of the solid waste district, claims the contract with Trans-American will cut county garbage disposal costs by about 50 percent, once the landfill is operational.

Trans-American would pay the county between $7 and $8 million over the next 20 years for garbage it will haul in from other counties who would use the landfill.

Boudin's currently hauls solid waste to landfills from the county and the cities to the Pecan Grove landfill in western Harrison County at a cost of about $20 a ton.

Fillingame said once the Standard landfill opens, that cost would be cut in half, to about $10 a ton.

If the school board agrees to sell the remaining 94 acres of Section 16 land to the Solid Waste District, Fillingame said Trans-American has promised to commit between $2 and $2.5 million to open up the Standard landfill.

"We have all the permits necessary," said Fillingame. "It can be up and running in about six months."

Fillingame said he will schedule an educational forum sometime in November at Hancock High School, and invite county supervisors, school board members, residents of Standard and the county to explain the reasons and the relative safety of operating the landfill at Standard.

"Trans-America has the experience and is completely capable of running a landfill safely, and according to all federal and state government regulations," he said.

"This is a non-hazardous solid waste site. It never was envisioned or licensed to handle anything other than non-hazardous solid waste," he added.

Fillingame said he plans a series of slide presentations, showing operations at Trans-American's landfill outside of Mobile, Ala.

"I want to show them that a sanitary landfill can be designed, constructed and operated to collect and treat leachate and methane gas so they will meet all environmental requirements," said Fillingame.

He said the slides will show how little of the area is disturbed.

"The working faces are kept small, and covered daily. When a landfill opens in the morning, there is no exposed waste from the previous day," said Fillingame.

He said slides will also show required lining will protect anything from leaking into the ground water supply, and how any landfill is constantly monitored by strict federal and state regulations.

"There is more of a chance of the water supply at Standard being fouled by the illegal dumping of raw sewage into ditches and streams than by anything that would be dumped at the landfill," Fillingame said.

He said engineers estimate the Standard landfill could accommodate close to 400 tons of solid waste a day over the next 20 years.

He explained that only about 50 tons a day is generated in Hancock County, so it would not be economically unfeasible to bar others from adjoining counties in the state or in Louisiana from using the facility in the event it opens.

Fillingame estimates the county has already expended over $100,000 on the permitting process for a rubbish site and landfill to be located at Standard.

He said if Standard is abandoned for the landfill site, obtaining new permits would take five to six years and cost the county hundreds of thousands more.

SUPERVISOR

District 1 • Hancock County

As a candidate for Supervisor, I cannot make or shall I say, I will not make any false promises. The only promise that I will honestly make is to do the best job I can possibly do.

Like my grandfather, Garfield Ladner, who was Mayor of Waveland for 34 years, I will listen to everybody's problems and concerns. Then, try to do my best to help them, if possible.

Don't forget, under the Unit System it takes more than one Supervisor to get a lot of things done. Three out of five Supervisors have to agree on an issue before it's done. That's why I say the only promise I will make is to do the best possible job I can for District One and the county.

I would like to apologize to anyone who feels like they can't vote for me because I didn't make it to their house personally. But I have four children, a wife and bills that come in every month, therefore I could not just quit working to campaign full time. I could not neglect my obligations I have now to campaign. Just as I will not neglect my duties of being Supervisor of District One, either.

I will do my job with the same commitment as I do everything else ... to do the best possible and that's a promise!

Don't let friends hurt a good class

By Dr. Ann Jarratt
4-H Youth Development
Cooperative Extension Service

"I have a big problem. One of my teachers has a reputation for being a bear. If you do one thing wrong, she growls at you and says things to embarrass you. She does this to everyone but me. She treats me differently for some reason, and I'm catching heck from everyone about it."

"I haven't done anything special to make her like me more than the others. The subject she teaches is my favorite and one I do well in, but I'm thinking of dropping it this year and taking it in summer school just to stop the stuff that's going on. I've thought about talking to her some time after class and trying to explain how she's coming across and the trouble it's causing me. What should I do?"

First, let me tell you what NOT to do. Don't drop this class you enjoy. It's almost never a good idea to let someone else dictate your choices. You chose the class for reasons that were important to you — none of which included taking it to please your buddies. The decision to drop it should be based on your needs and not on what they think or say.

Talking to your teacher privately is a great idea. She probably does like you and appreciates your interest in the subject and doesn't have any idea about the problem you're having. I don't believe any teacher would want to continue doing something that's making it difficult for the student. You have the obligation to explain what's going on.

In the meantime, turn some of the teasing around and tell your friends that you'd be glad to hold a workshop to teach them how to be the teacher's pet if they showed a little potential.

"I'm having this problem this year. I feel like an emotional wreck. One minute I'm on the verge of tears; the next I may be laughing myself silly. If I read or watch anything that's even the least bit sad, I nearly drown myself with tears. On the other hand, I may get tickled over almost nothing and laugh until

I can't stand up. "Do you think there's something bad wrong with me?" It's probably a condition called "adolescence." You also may be a sensitive person by nature.

I couldn't begin to explain the complex chemical changes that are going on in your body since you became a teen, but I do know that they're definitely going on. These changes affect each of us a little differently. Some of your friends may not be having the concerns you are, but they're probably having a whole different set.

Talk with your parents about your concerns. If after talking it over, you both think your emotional flip-flopping needs a physician's opinion, make an appointment with your family doctor.

It's possible that you will feel more comfortable after talking with your doctor. If you haven't had a checkup lately, now is probably a good time to schedule one.

If you have any questions concerning your teenage years, write Dr. Ann Jarratt, 4-H youth development specialist, Box 9641, Mississippi State, MS 39762.

USM fall colloquium

The 1995 fall colloquium to be presented by the University of Southern Mississippi's School of Social Work will focus on poverty issues here in Mississippi.

The colloquium, scheduled Dec. 8, is designed to bring together experts who study or work in poverty areas to discuss all sides of the issue. Dr. Tim Rehner, assistant professor of Social Work at USM, is heading the colloquium planning effort.

"We're working on a program that looks at poverty from a three-pronged approach," Rehner said. "We want to look at poverty as it affects the Southeast as a region. We also want to look at programmatic issues that may affect the delivery of services. And we also want to look at the progress and setbacks made (in programs related to poverty)."

Final details on a time and location for the colloquium will be announced at a later date.

For information, call the School of Social Work at 266-4163.

COOKING UP A STORM

By Katy McGuire
Caire

If the thought of whipping up a cheese souffle startles you out of your culinary wits; or if you, like I, live a somewhat unpredictable life, wherein the phone shrills at the final minute with an urgent message, or tardy guests linger over cocktails just as you're about to remove your puffed-up golden specialty from the oven — just change your ways and do as I do, serve up a "Sneaky" Souffle.

Easy and tasty and quite adaptable, the sneaky souffle recipe is good to have on hand. You may assemble it the evening before you plan to serve it, or just a few hours ahead. Or, when you're really desperate for time, stash the casserole in the freezer for just a few minutes to chill, before refrigerating it (although it doesn't come out as well that way — but when you're "in a jam" — that's it!).

If the diners are truly tardy at table, you can always christen the dish "Fallen Angel Souffle" and swear that it was supposed to sink in the middle. This dish is really what is called a "Strata," a layered dish. Here's:

"EVER SO SNEAKY SOUFFLE"

6 or 7 slices day-old bread
Softened butter or margarine for spreading, as needed
4 eggs
2 cups milk

4 oz. sharp Cheddar cheese, grated

Dashes of hot pepper sauce and pepper, to your taste and tolerance; skip or spare the salt if you're using it.

First of all, butter quite liberally a 1½- or 2-quart casserole dish, bottom and sides. Trim the crusts from the bread and spread generously with butter or margarine. Cut the slices in half, or smaller size as needed to fit your dish, butter side up. Line the bottom and sides of the dish with all but 2 slices of the bread.

Beat together the eggs, milk and cheese. Add the hot pepper sauce and pepper and salt if you're using it. Pour the mixture over the bread pieces, top with the reserved slices. Cover and refrigerate for at least a few hours, or overnight, so that the bread becomes quite soggy with the mixture.

Bake at 375 degrees for 30 to 40 minutes or until the top puffs up and turns golden and a knife inserted in the center comes away clean. Speed the souffle and the diners to the table, for a souffle, neaky or otherwise, collapses dismally if kept waiting.

For variety, I add chopped cooked shrimp or ham or crabmeat or leftover green peas or what have you to this neaky souffle. (4 servings)

Harvest mushrooms at grocery stores

By Dr. Milo Burnham
Horticulturist
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

For the past couple of weeks my compost pile has been covered with flushes of yellow mushrooms. After the rains of Hurricane Erin came through in early August, mushrooms sprouted everywhere. There were large, white toadstools often appearing in lawns and grassy areas in huge circles or portions of circles.

September and October are months when many different wild mushrooms suddenly appear in yards, on old stumps, on rotting timber and in wooded areas.

People often ask if these mushrooms are edible. While some of them may be, I can't tell the difference between those that are edible and those that can kill you. I prefer to play it safe and get my mushrooms at the grocery store.

Grocery stores, especially those in major metropolitan areas, offer a pretty good selection of mushrooms. These are all commercially grown, but include some mushrooms which not too long ago were considered wild.

An article in a recent issue of The Packer, the business newspaper of the produce industry, described one Minnesota mushroom grower who grew or brokered 10 types of cultivated mushrooms, and eight wild varieties.

The mushroom making the biggest gains in popularity is Portabella. Portabellas are matured Crimini mushrooms and are among the most difficult mushrooms to grow.

Portabellas are the largest mushrooms you're likely to see in grocery stores. Each mushroom may have a diameter of 6 or more inches. It is sometimes sold sliced rather than whole.

Portabellas are gaining in popularity as meat substitutes, and frequently are prepared by grilling, used in sandwiches or topped with sauce, cheese and other ingredients to make pizzas.

Some describe eating Portabella as similar to biting into a tender piece of steak, chicken or veal — except without the calories. The flavor apparently depends on what they are cooked with.

Mississippi has producers of shiitake mushrooms, which are wild mushrooms in the Orient that were brought under cultivation. Also known as Black Forest mushroom and Chinese mushroom, the Shiitake has an excellent smoky flavor. Many Chinese restaurants use imported, dried Shiitake mushrooms in their dishes. This is my favorite mushroom to eat.

The Morel mushroom, harvested only from the wild, has long been reputed as the finest of mushrooms in the United States. Starting this fall, a company in Alabama expects to begin producing Morels by a patented cultivation practice. Terry Farms, the nation's fifth largest mushroom grower, expects to produce about 5,000 pounds of Morels a week.

In case you're thinking about making your fortune growing mushrooms, it isn't an easy process. The most popular types of mushrooms (button, Crimini and Portabella) are grown indoors where you must be capable of getting the temperature down to 62 to 64 degrees. Shiitake mushrooms have less stringent growth requirements which makes them a little easier to grow in Mississippi.

If you like mushrooms, you're sure to like Shiitake. When shopping for mushrooms give Shiitake a try. More than likely you'll be helping a Mississippi grower.

'Learning to share' at day care can mean passing on illnesses

A child's first year in a group day care setting is a period that's likely to be marked with illness. Children in licensed child care centers have three to four times as much diarrheal disease than those who stay at home, according to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Under age two, children in group day care may get sick six to 10 times a year. The frequency of illness declines slightly for children two to five years old.

"When children enter a group setting, they are subjected to hundreds of viruses that they haven't been exposed to before, and therefore have no immunity against," said pediatrician David Fontaine, MD. "The impact is often less severe on older children."

Controlling the spread
Many centers attempt to limit the spread of disease by excluding sick children. But the problem is with most illnesses, children are contagious for at least one to two days before they develop any signs or symptoms, said pediatrician Bertrand Sy, MD. A common example of this is chicken pox.

By the time they are excluded from the group setting, they may have already infected other children.

Parents can take the following steps to minimize the spread of illness:

— Immunize. Have your child immunized according to the schedule suggested by your pediatrician. You can prevent nine of the most serious illnesses (diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis, polio, measles, mumps, rubella, Haemophilus influenza type B and hepatitis B) with immunizations.

— Wash hands. Teach your child good hygiene habits. Hand washing is the single most effective procedure for preventing the transmission of communicable diseases, according to the American Academy of Pediatrics. A child is never too young to learn this basic defense against germs.

— Choose carefully. Select your child care center with great care. Look for a center with the following characteristics:

- Toys, equipment, bedding, floors and walls are cleaned and disinfected regularly.
- Staff washes hands after toileting, diapering and nose blowing and handling food.
- Rooms are large enough to accommodate a variety of activities without crowding.
- Ventilation is adequate.
- Children are grouped by age. Toilet trained children should be separated from those who aren't.
- Food preparation areas are set apart from classrooms and bathrooms.
- Diaper changing areas are restricted from use for other purposes.
- Toddlers have appropriately-sized toilet training fixtures and handwashing facilities.
- Staff members are given pre-employment medical evaluations which specifically address health issues related to child care.
- Parents are provided with written materials containing the center's policies regarding communicable diseases and parent responsibility for notification of center staff.

This information is provided for your health by the pediatric staff of Hancock Medical Center in Bay St. Louis.

Volunteer training sessions

Hospice, a patient and family-focused organization dedicated to cost-effective, comprehensive care for terminally ill persons, provides home medical care for persons no longer seeking curative treatment.

Volunteer opportunities are available in direct patient care, including patient visits, letter writing, child care, reading to patients, and bereavement support groups. Clerical work is also always needed.

'Highway 61' show on PRM marks anniversary

From death row inmates to lawyers, the weekly blues music radio show "Highway 61" has amassed a diverse audience in its years on the air.

This fall marks the 10th anniversary that the heralded show has been produced by The University of Mississippi and its Center for the Study of Southern Culture. The show airs on Public Radio in Mississippi (PRM) every Saturday from 10 p.m. to midnight.

The show started in 1984 and was first hosted by PRM's Steven Brull. After Brull left "Highway 61" to continue his education, Dr. William Ferris—director of the Center for the Study of Southern Culture and an internationally known blues scholar—took over the microphone.

Known as "The Blues Doctor," Ferris served as host for nearly a decade before handing the reins over to his longtime engineer and programmer, David Nelson, who is also editor of the Living Blues magazine.

As one of the few local shows not produced by PRM, Ferris said the relationship has been a perfect marriage benefitting both PRM and Ole Miss. The university is home of the nationally recognized Blues Archive, which houses the extensive collections of records, books, photographs, posters, clippings and memorabilia. Opened in 1984, the Blues Archive features the "Living Blues," Kenneth S. Goldstein and B. B. King collections, and consists of more than 3,500 33-rpm records, 4,100 78-rpm records, 75 reels of concert films and 300 posters.

"Because of our rich resources through the Blues Archive and Living Blues magazine, we produce a first-class show," Ferris said. "The marriage works because we are able to garner recognition for our work on blues, and PRM gets a good show each week."

William Fulton, PRM director, said when the radio network began in the early 1980s, it was simply understood that a blues radio show would have to be a part of the programming schedule. "Highway 61" has more than fit the bill.

"Ole Miss and the Center for the Study of Southern Culture have done an excellent job and we are proud to have the program on our schedule," Fulton said. "Through 'Highway 61' Public Radio in Mississippi has utilized our own state resources and has been able to promote a form of music that is truly homegrown."

Each week, Fulton estimates that PRM is heard by some 100,000 listeners within Mississippi. The show reaches not only throughout Mississippi but also into New Orleans, Little Rock, Memphis, Birmingham, Mobile and southeast Missouri. During the late 1980s, the show also was carried internationally over Armed Forces Radio to an audience of millions.

Now that he has handed over the headphones, Ferris looks back fondly on his days as host. One of the biggest rewards—and the aspect he misses most—is the contact with listeners.

"There is no substitute for that contact with people who tell you your work has impacted their lives," said Ferris, who had no radio experience before "Highway 61."

"I regularly received letters from death row inmates telling me how much a song spoke to them. They made requests to friends and family on the outside; likewise, friends and family made requests to inmates. It was truly a touching experience."

Unlike Ferris, Nelson—who has engineered and helped program the show since late 1990—came on board with several years of radio experience. Before joining the Ole Miss staff, he hosted a reggae show at the University of North Carolina for six years, a job he started while still in high school. He became editor of "Living Blues" magazine in the summer of 1992.

Nelson said radio has always played a big part in spreading the blues sound dating back to such stations as Nashville's WLAC in the 1940s and '50s, the King Biscuit Time Show from Helena, Ark., and Memphis' WDIA. Before "Highway 61" came long, Mississippi did not have a statewide blues show.

"What 'Highway 61' has done, and what I've continued to stress since becoming host, is promoting our own talent. We play listeners' requests, but we try to keep our focus on new releases by Mississippi artists. That's something people aren't necessarily going to hear on other blues shows."

Most recently, PRM called on "Highway 61" when Garrison Keillor's "Prairie Home Companion" radio show made a visit to Jackson. Fulton said the show's producers wanted to feature a blues performer, so he quite naturally referred them to Nelson and Ferris.

"Thanks to them we had Mississippi's Lonnie Pitchford on the show. It turned out to be a tremendous success and helped promote a Mississippi musician in the process," Fulton said.

MSU dorm lives again

Believed to be the largest college dormitory under one roof when it burned to the ground nearly four decades ago, Mississippi state's Old Main lives again in a historical account now on sale.

In "Old Main: Images of a Legend," Mississippi State historians Charles Lowery and Roy Scott capture much of the building's still-strong campus aura. The 144-page, hardbound collection of history, personal reminiscences and photographs is published by the Mississippi State University Alumni Association through Harmony House Publishers of Louisville, Ky.

The book can be ordered by credit card by calling the alumni association at 601-325-2434. The history also will be available in selected bookstores in Starkville and across the state.

A copy of the book will be provided free to members of the Old Main Society, a donor club that helps preserve and maintain memorials and historic structures on campus. Members of the society are those who include Mississippi State as a beneficiary in their wills.

Old Main, a four-story, 500-room quadrangle considerably larger than a football field, housed an estimated 40,000 students in its 80-year life. It was destroyed by fire in 1959, but countless stories told by generations of former residents remain, as do many of the massive structures' red bricks. They went into the 1965 construction of another campus landmark, the Chapel of Memories.

Dormitory residents, the authors write, "came from the state's farms, towns and cities to study agriculture, engineering and other disciplines and to live in the Spartan rooms of Old Main. They might complain of its drafty windows, dark halls and primitive plumbing, but they found comfort and reassurance in its solidity and apparent indestructibility."

"Other buildings, to say nothing of professors and students, might come and go, but Old Main, located in the center of campus, would remain forever, or so they thought."

Lowery is head of Mississippi State's history department, while Scott, one of the university's William L. Giles Distinguished Professors, is a former president of the Mississippi Historical Society.

Musical traditions of jazz explored at NOMA

Music has long been an integral part of sub-Saharan African societies. In an upcoming exhibition at the New Orleans Museum of Art, Roots of American Jazz: African Musical Instruments from New Orleans, this special relationship of Africans and their music is explored Nov. 12 through Jan. 7 in the Ella West Freeman Gallery on the first floor.

A companion exhibition to Louis Armstrong: A Cultural Legacy on view concurrently at the Museum, Roots of American Jazz celebrates the musical traditions of many tribal peoples from Central and West Africa.

The exhibition, organized by NOMA's Curator of African Art, William Fagaly, includes a variety of musical instruments as well as sculptures of figures playing musical instruments. A collection of thumb pianos, drums, trumpets, horns, rattles, harps, gongs, bells, whistles and other items made from wood, ivory, gourds, metals and animal skins and sinews are included in the display.

"To African cultures, music has been an essential part of the celebration of life cycles," explains Fagaly, who also serves as the Museum's assistant director of art. "Many African rites of passage, such as births, initiations, funerals, and ancestor ceremonies as well as annual festivals related to agriculture and special rituals for emergencies and disasters all had music as a prominent component."

In Africa musical instruments are sometimes associated with spirits or deities and other times revered themselves as sacred religious objects. Instruments are used in conjunction with shepherding animals, social dancing, entertainment, communications (talking drums) and divination.

"Undeniably the roots of jazz are found in African traditions," continues Fagaly. "With this exhibition, we have the opportunity to explore, through the generosity of several local New Orleans collectors, the very beginnings of a musical form that is uniquely American and which had its birth in our own city."

New Orleans, often called the crucible of jazz, was the center of the development for this new expression. Jazz music is often referred to as America's first original art form.

"We are in the enviable position of having man private collections of African art form which to draw upon when assembling specialized exhibitions. Having the Louis Armstrong exhibition here, in the home of his birth, gave us an opportunity to give something extra special to the people of New Orleans that pays tribute not only to the man and to the city of New Orleans, but also to the heritage of his African culture," says Fagaly.

The exhibition coincides with the city's celebration of the Centennial of Jazz. A special preview of both the Roots of Jazz and Louis Armstrong: A Cultural Legacy will be the highlight of the Museum's 30th annual Odyssey Ball fund-raiser Nov. 11.

The Louis Armstrong exhibition chronicles the life of Armstrong from his childhood in New Orleans to the later years in Corona, Queens. The exhibition follows his career as a musician from his humble, impoverished beginnings in the rural South to international acclaim and stardom. Armstrong was called the King of Jazz and, often, the Ambassador of Jazz for his frequent appearances in United States government-sponsored trips to foreign countries. It includes documents, memorabilia, original recordings, radio broadcasts and video clips in a multi-media tribute to his life.

Texas roller coaster rated world's best

The Texas Giant has been rated the No. 1 roller coaster in the world by readers of Inside Track magazine. This is the second time in four years that the Giant has been named the world's top coaster.

The crown jewel of Six Flags Over Texas' coaster collection, the Texas Giant also has been recognized as the top wooden roller coaster for four consecutive years by Inside Track readers. The National Amusement Park Historical Association also has named the Giant the world's No. 1 wooden coaster for two consecutive years.

"The Giant has been the park's most popular ride since it opened in 1990," said park president Robert Bennett.

Six Flags Over Texas was bestowed with several other honors by Inside Track readers. The Arlington theme park was voted as one of the 10 favorite parks in the country. The hit country music production, "Hot Rockin' Country" was rated as one of the top indoor shows and the Batman Forever Laser and Fireworks Show was honored as one of the best outdoor shows.

"It's wonderful to see that we were recognized not only for our rides but also the terrific family shows we present," Bennett said.

Inside Track is a nationwide publication that specializes in covering theme parks and other similar entertainment outlets. The reader's poll is in its ninth year.

"We have the most knowledgeable and qualified voters," said Inside Track editor Mark Wyatt. "I don't know of another group of people who spend all of their off-time visiting parks across the country — they are a wide cross-section of people of all ages and from all walks of life."

Wyatt said the Giant won because it combines everything that thrillseekers are looking for in a coaster.

"It has great speed and excellent drops," Wyatt said. "Some coasters provide different elements that the Giant puts together in one excellent package. It's a fun ride. It deserves to be number one."

The Texas Giant has earned its name, standing 143 feet tall and stretching across a 2.9 acre site in the park's Texas Section.

Its first drop sends guests soaring 137 feet at a 53-degree angle. The estimated top speed is 63 miles per hour with an average speed of 39 mph. The ride last over two minutes and accommodates 1,800 riders per hour.

Venture through 11 themed areas of Texas' past and present at Six Flags Over Texas.

Six Flags Theme Parks Inc. is the No. 2 theme park company in the U.S. and the nation's largest regional theme park company, hosting over 21 million visitors a year.

An estimated 85 percent of all Americans live within driving distance of the 11 Six Flags theme parks at seven Six Flags locations: Six Flags Over Texas and Wet'n Wild (Dallas/Fort Worth); Six Flags Over Georgia (Atlanta); Six Flags Over Mid-America (St. Louis); Six Flags Houston, which includes Six Flags Astro World and Six Flags Water World; Six Flags Great Escape and Six Flags Wild Safari Animal Park (Jackson, N.J.); Six Flags California, which includes Six Flags Magic Mountain and Six Flags Hurricane Harbor (Los Angeles); Six Flags Great America (Chicago/Milwaukee).

Respiratory graduate

The respiratory therapy program at Mississippi Gulf Coast Community College's Jackson County Campus in Gautier has experienced another distinction, according to Dr. Judith Benvenuti, the college's coordinator for Health Occupations.

"All 1995 graduates have passed the National Certification Examination," she says, crediting program director Judi Scott, CRTT, and instructor Rombulus Matthews, CRTT, for the 100 percent pass rate.

Among the graduates was Terry McQueen from Bay St. Louis.

Students admitted to the advanced level respiratory therapy program must have successfully passed the basic certified respiratory technician national exam and be recommended for the program.

For information about the therapy program, call 497-9602, ext. 290.

BACKACHE.

The little pain that lasts and lasts.

Back pain often starts small. Sometimes it disappears; usually it returns; often it gets worse. If left untreated, back pain can linger for years as a nagging reminder that all is not well.

Your job may be the culprit; you may sit all day hunched over a desk; you may lift heavy objects; you may be constantly bending over, caring for children. These are common causes of misaligned vertebrae of the spine and may be good reasons why you have back pain.

And because the spine is a complex system which is connected to other areas of the body, misaligned vertebrae in the spine can also be the reason for tension, stiffness, fatigue and more specifically back pain and headaches.

Our doctors at HODA CHIROPRACTIC CLINICS are specialists in back care. They can restore spinal vertebrae to their proper position, relieving pain and avoiding further complications.

Make this the last morning your back is left untreated. See Dr. Desmond W. Hoda.

THE SEA COAST ECHO—SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1995-21A

Financial Focus

Stocks for the golden years

It takes years of hard work and discipline to accumulate a retirement nest egg. So it's understandable that retirees want to safeguard their assets, often choosing investments that guarantee their principal. With such investments, many retirees figure, they can live off the interest and never run out of money.

In fact, investment professionals suggested for many years that as investors grow older, more of their assets should be placed in bonds, which guarantee principal if held to maturity.

The old rule of thumb was that the proportion investors keep in stocks would be 100 minus their age. At age 40, for example, a mix of 60 percent stocks and 40 percent bonds would be appropriate. At age 70, however, that mix would change to 30 percent stocks and 70 percent bonds.

However, in a recent interview by Mutual Funds News Service, a major investment manager said such over-conservative investing could actually prove overly risky. Although your principal may be guaranteed, it has no opportunity to grow. And retirees need some growth in their investments to stay ahead of inflation.

In fact, today's 70-year-olds can realistically plan for another 20 to 25 years. Over such a long time period, inflation can be a big factor. Even at a reasonable annual inflation rate of 3 percent or 4 percent, the fixed levels of income offered by guaranteed investments can lose more than 50 percent of their purchasing power over a 10-year period. For example, during the last 40 years, the price of a stamp has risen from 3 cents to 32 cents. To help stay ahead of rising prices, today's retirees should follow a different rule of thumb: Bonds should be no more than your age multiplied by 80 percent. The rest should be in stocks. For example, a 60-year-old's investments should be 48 percent bonds and 52 percent stocks. At age 70, the combination should be 56 percent bonds and 44 percent stocks.

The reason for having more invested in stocks than traditionally recommended is to allow capital to grow. Otherwise, professional money managers say, retirees risk losing buying power to inflation or, worse, running out of money.

One of the best ways to achieve that growth is with stocks. According to the 1995 Ibbotson Associates Yearbook, the compounded annual return for the periods 1925-1994 for various investments was as follows:

Stocks
Small Company Stocks 12.2%
Large Company Stocks 10.2%
Bonds
Long-term Government Bonds 4.8%
U.S. Treasury Bills 3.7%

Over the same period, inflation averaged 3.1 percent, and stocks did a significantly better job of outpacing inflation.

However, it is true that stocks offer greater price swings than most fixed-income investments. Diversifying your portfolio with the proper mix of fixed-income and growth investments can help minimize the risks of price swings.

Over the long term, stocks have proven to outperform any other type of investment. Don't miss out on their advantages, especially during your golden years.

Transfer of NASA technologies creates more than 10,000 jobs

More than 10,500 jobs have been generated through technology transfer by NASA's three Southeast field centers and their associated regional technology transfer center, according to the latest results of an ongoing NASA survey of industries which have asked NASA for technology assistance.

In addition to the jobs and economic benefit results, the survey shows there are more than 450 new products being manufactured as a result of space-derived technologies.

The job and economic benefit results were compiled as an analysis of industrial assistance interactions in 44 of the 50 United States since January 1993. The analysis helps NASA's technology outreach programs, operated by the Stennis Space Center in South Mississippi, the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., the Kennedy Space Center in Florida and the Southern Technology Applications Center in Gainesville, Fla., gauge their effectiveness in transferring space-derived technologies to American businesses, schools and individuals across the nation.

The three NASA field centers and the regional technology transfer center formed a Southeast Technology Transfer Alliance in January to facilitate and coordinate technology transfer in the southern region.

"We are pleased with the success of the alliance," said NASA's Anne Johnson, manager of the Stennis Space Center technology transfer office. "It has afforded each of the participants an opportunity to utilize the collective resources of the group to enhance technology transfer activities in the region, thereby increasing taxpayer return on investment."

Among the most successful means of introducing NASA technology to industry is through its outreach program, whereby a team of NASA and contractor engineers, together with local economic development officials, visit communities and work together with business to resolve manufacturing problems. The teams meet with the firms' corporate executives and engineering and design staffs to discuss problem areas and seek to identify NASA technologies which, when applied, will result in appropriate, quickly supplied, cost-effective solutions.

NASA's outreach endeavor makes available for down-to-earth industrial applications thousands of items developed for use in space. Remote sensing, geographic information systems, satellite image enhancement, lightweight materials, heat resistant shielding, insulating foams, welding technologies, computer software and a host of other inventions are finding new commercial applications each day.

This latest survey of the impact on the U.S. economy by the Southeast Alliance was based on an analysis of approximately 3,000 requests for technical assistance in resolving problems. Some 18 percent of the respondents said the alliance's assistance had been helpful in resolving the problem for which help had been sought, and 95 percent said they would seek alliance assistance, if needed, to resolve problems in the future.

Holidays prime time for con artists

Consumers need to be especially aware of charitable fraud during the holidays or when natural disasters or other crises occur, according to the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP).

State agencies and law enforcement officials report that the number of misleading or fraudulent pitches by representatives of so-called "charitable" organizations generally increases during the period from Thanksgiving to New Year's Day. And disasters such as the recent hurricanes and the Oklahoma City bombing attract the worst kind of con artists.

"When you read or hear an emotional appeal for a charity during the holidays or when a tragedy strikes, you may be more likely to give without thinking," says George Jobe of Biloxi AARP state director for Mississippi.

"Unfortunately, unless you are vigilant, you may be contributing to a group that is misrepresenting its fund-raising activities or soliciting for a phony cause."

AARP has some suggestions to help you avoid becoming a victim of charitable fraud:

1. Never respond to an emotional appeal from a caller who is seeking funds to help victims of illness, abuse or disaster. Always demand that such callers provide you with written information before you consider giving.

2. Ask that printed information about the charity, including its name, address and phone number; a statement of how and where donated funds will be used; and the charity's state registration number (where applicable) be mailed to you.

3. Ask what percentage of the money you give will be used for a charitable purpose and how much will be kept by the fundraiser.

4. Never send cash to a charity or give out your credit card or bank account number over the phone. Instead, if you wish to contribute, write a check and note on it what the donation is for.

If you have questions about a charitable solicitation you receive over the phone, by mail or in person — or if you suspect that a solicitation is fraudulent — contact: Office of the Secretary of State, Charities Registration, P. O. Box 136, Jackson, MS 39205, (601) 359-1371.

Information sought for statewide calendar

The Mississippi Division of Tourism Development is currently seeking event information for its May-October 1996 printed calendar of statewide events. Deadline for receiving events is Nov. 17.

The current calendar, November 1995-April 1996, is available free of charge by contacting 1-800-WARMEST, the state's tourist inquiry center.

Area convention and visitors bureaus, chambers of commerce and tourism offices have the necessary forms to submit the event to the calendar. Anyone wishing to list an event should obtain the form and submit the event through their local tourism organization.

The Mississippi Division of tourism encourages all statewide event coordinators to work closely with their local tourism offices on showcasing events within their communities. Due to a rigid printing schedule, no event forms will be accepted beyond the specified deadline.

For information contact Lawanda Turnage at the Mississippi Division of Tourism at (601) 359-3297.

Life is complicated. So are franchise agreements.

Most of us tire of the complexity of legal documents.
With this thought in mind, we offer the following shortened explanation:

- Franchise Agreements are not required. The Public Service Commission establishes which electric utility serves an area.
- The law requires that electric utilities pay a municipality 2% of all residential and commercial revenue generated within the municipality. In return, the electric utility gets to use certain rights of way owned by the city.
- Mississippi Power has a Franchise Agreement with all* of the municipalities it serves. These agreements were signed in 1971 and will expire next year.
- The current agreements provide that Mississippi Power pay to the Municipality 3% of all revenue generated within the municipality.
- Mississippi Power is proposing to continue this arrangement. We believe that the economic vitality of the municipalities we serve is the source of our financial strength. Unlike many companies, Mississippi Power cannot "pull up stakes" and go somewhere else. Because these agreements have been in place for a long time (nearly 25 years), the municipalities have benefited from the additional revenue resulting in lower taxes for those who live within the cities.
- The new agreements are identical to the current agreements except the city could not go into the electric utility business during the term of the agreement.
- In order for us to continue the current arrangement, we must have a Franchise Election.
- In order to continue the current arrangement, we must have a majority vote in favor of the agreement.

For more than 70 years, we've worked to provide you electricity at a competitive price. We've also worked to provide a level of customer service that is second to none. We're going to continue to do that as we build a future together. We also want to continue to be a part of the economic vitality of the cities we serve. It's simple. Vote yes.

To All The Voters Who Supported Me In District Four:

THANK YOU!

For your tremendous support over the last several months. We fought a good fight against 18 years of incumbency. We made a strong statement by standing together. We did not receive the vote in the black voting precincts, thereby putting the incumbent's son in the General Election.

We must now move forward. If you would like to join the newly formed Hancock County Citizens for Good Government, you can write to: P.O. BOX 2063, BAY ST. LOUIS, MS 39520.

I would like to congratulate the Democratic Executive Committee of Hancock County for electing Mr. Charles L. Burt as their new Chairman. The party will be a stronger party with this true Arkansian Razorback at the helm.

Congratulations, Charles, and God bless you and God bless Hancock County.

Advertorial

Why advertise in ???

The Sea Coast Echo

Advertising is an investment in the success of your business. Every business has some kind of competition, either within the town, nearby city or from mail-order firms. Your potential customers are being courted by your competitors. If you do not invite those customers to do business with you, they are likely to forget you and buy elsewhere. It is not uncommon for consumers to switch their trading from one store to another. Advertising helps to keep old customers and equally as important, make new ones.

Our community is constantly growing which means that potential customers are moving into the market area all the time. Advertising gives these newcomers a reason to visit your store.

Most businesses budget for their advertising expenses just as they do for other necessities such as rent, phones, etc. Smart business people realize that advertising is imperative to keep their business growing.

Another reason to advertise is that advertising is news! You profit by telling our readers what is new in your store. Through advertising, you can let a wide audience know the product lines you carry, the quality of your merchandise, the completeness of your service and the character of your store.

If you have something to sell, then you have something to advertise. When you have nothing to advertise, you are out of business. Advertising is designed to build your business and works best when it is repeated regularly. Consistent advertising pays off!

Now that you know some of the reasons to advertise, you're probably wondering how you can advertise most effectively. Surveys show that ads in local newspapers have more impact than in any other medium. The Sea Coast Echo goes into the majority of the homes in Hancock County. The Sea Coast Echo is full of interesting reading, it is a part of our community. People like to read about people and The Sea Coast Echo is full of pictures and stories about local people. The most important reason to advertise in The Sea Coast Echo is that our readers are your customers.

If you are looking for the best advertising value for your money, then you should contact the advertising department at The Sea Coast Echo. One of our advertising representatives will be happy to discuss the many advertising options offered by The Sea Coast Echo. Waveland American Legion Post 77 makes history American veterans who have risked or given their lives in war are history makers in themselves. On Oct. 28, the American Legion Post 77 in Waveland made history of its own.

Post 77 became the first organization to receive the 1995 Distinguished Service Award at Pearl River Community College. The PRCC Alumni Association presented the award Saturday at the college's annual homecoming banquet.

The American Legion Post 77 has given more than $125,000 in student scholarships to PRCC in the past 15 years. The money has helped 365 students get a college education.

"The Alumni Association Executive Committee usually gives this award to an individual alumnus," said Donna Wilson, executive director of PRCC's Alumni Association. "However, several outstanding alumni are members of the American Legion Post 77."

Post 77 Commander Richard Smith accepted the award. Ray Norton, Post 77 scholarship chairman, accompanied Smith at the banquet.

"The Post truly deserves this award," said Wilson. "The Post is very supportive of other projects on campus including the River Extravaganza."

The Extravaganza is PRCC's largest annual fund raiser for scholarships and teacher enhancement grants. Wilson said several members of Post 77 attended the event each year.

In addition to its support for PRCC, Post 77 also supports many community projects. Among its many activities, the Post:

— sponsors Boy Scout Troop 77 and Cub Scouts

— distributes Thanksgiving and Christmas food baskets to less fortunate families in Hancock County

— sponsors little league baseball and soccer teams in Waveland

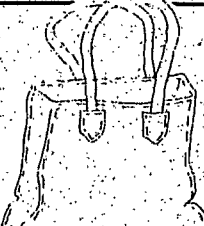

— honors outstanding students from local schools

— sponsors eight boys to attend the Boys State American Legion annual program

— sponsors an oratorical contest in Hancock County

— conducts Red Cross blood donor programs every six months

— sponsors the Children and Youth Program that provides Christmas gifts for needy children and Easter egg hunts and Halloween parties.
